E pluribus unum coin 1880 value

One of the collectors and most popular coins, the Morgan Silver Dollar, was produced at a time when the United States was seeing a major revolution in industry and overall growth. Commonly known as a coin that holds its value, The Morgan Dollar sees great demand by collectors and investors a well. The new Morgan dollar was commissioned after the passage of the Brand Allison Act of 1873, and the Mint be started buying large quantities of silver. Mint sculptor George T. Morgan designed the Morgan Dollar, which was quickly accepted by the Mint in 1878 and put into production. The Morgan dollar was reintroduced in 1921, after Mint was able to build a silver holding. In 1921, there was also the introduction of a peace dollar that permanently halted production of the Morgan Silver Dollar. Next to morgan dollar is a bust of Liberty facing left, with the date directly below. The word E PLURIBUS UNUM can be found above Liberty. The stars fill the space along the edge between the date and the beginning of the motto. Morgan's reverse features an eagle with wings spread over its talons and olive branches and arrows. Wreaths starting from under the eagle surround the design. The words United States of America and $1 are near the edge of the coin. In God we trust is directly above the eagle, but under the words found along the edge. History of the 1880 Morgan Dollar Unlike other coins in the series, the 1880 Morgan dollar had a relatively low mint rate. The U.S. Mint in Philadelphia reports that it produces just 12,600,000 examples. These low mintage numbers are why the 1880 Morgan dollar is valued more than other examples in the series. The Pittman Act of 1918 saw a melt of about 270 million Morgan silver dollars for all years. Morgan Druz also saw a thaw in the early 1980s as silver prices hit all-time highs. This melting disables the number of mints produced, and the actual survival is much lower than that described. Like all other Morgan silver dollars, the 1880 Morgan dollar was made using a composition of 90% silver and 10% copper. The coin weighs 26.73 grams and has a diameter of 38.1 mm. The lead ring can be found on the edge and the denticle is around both the opposite and the other. This error is seen as a major error and carries a premium against regular strikes. 1880/79 Over-breed is unique in the sense that the date was applied directly to the date of the previous year. In most cases, part of 7 is found in 8 in 80. Another telling part is that 9 in 79 is seen in the ridge of 0 of 80. Some of ovedate is hard to see, so magnification may be used when trying to find this error. Examples of this error are not very generated and are very rare to find today. If you determine that the 1880 Morgan dollar is over-age, be sure to ask the coin dealer for a second opinion. The value of the 1880 Morgan Dromintage, combined with the sheer volume melted by the government and consumers, makes the value of 1880 Morgan dollars much higher than on other dates. The average condition 1880 Morgan dollars is valued somewhere around $28. An unso circulated example of ms-60 retailing is $47. The higher grade of MS-63 sees a value of $65, while those with MS-65 see a significant increase to $675. The MS-65 example is predicted to be worth $3,377! The exact number of remaining 1880 Morgan dollars is not available, so it's hard for collectors and dealers to accurately price coins. Because of this uncertainty, the price of 1880 Morgan dollars is likely to rise in value over the next few years. (See details).Type: Morgan Silver Dollar Year: 1880 Mint Mark: No Mint Mark Amount: 1.00 USD Gross Production: 12,600,000 [?] Silver Content: 90% Silverweight: 0.7735 oz Silver Melt: $19.94 Worth: As a rough estimate of this coin value, on average this coin is valued at around $30, and one of the certified mint states (MS+) can bring in as much as $700 at auction. This price does not refer to any standard coin grading scale. So the average means that in a state similar to other coins issued in 1880, mint status means it is MS+ certified by one of the top coin grading companies. [?]. ADDITIONAL INFO: These coins sell for up to $1200, but most sales come around the $700 range. Numismatic vs Built-in Value: This poorly conditioned coin is still worth $10.06 more than its intrinsic value from the silver content of $19.94, and therefore this coin is more valuable to collectors than silver bugs. A coin worth a lot to collectors may be a better long-term investment. If the metal price has lowered, you still have coins that money would like to buy. Need more information?
